BULGUR PALACE

A restored historical place in Fatih, Istanbul

It was designed by Italian architect Giulio Mongeri in 1912 by Mehmet Habip Bey, who was a soldier and member of parliament in the Ottoman Empire. The building bears the characteristics of the First National Architecture movement. However, its construction could not be completed and it was transferred to the Ottoman Bank. Then the building was abandoned. Istanbul Metropolitan Municipality purchased Bulgur Palace in 2021 and the building was restored and opened to visitors in March 2024 to serve as a document center, archive, library, exhibition hall and cafe.
