RUMELI HISARI

15th-century castle located on a hill with towers, walking paths and Bosphorus views

Rumelihisarı is a medieval Ottoman fortress located in Istanbul on a series of hills on the European banks of the Bosphorus. The three large towers of the fortress, which was completed in a short time of ninety days, have the largest bastions in the world. The timber used in the construction of the fortress was obtained from Iznik the stones and lime were obtained from various parts of Anatolia, and the polished stone were obtained from the ruined Byzantine buildings in the surrounding area. Rumeli Fortress is used as a museum today. Artifacts consisting of cannons, cannonballs and a piece of the chain said to close the Golden Horn are exhibited in the garden.
